2. 대화를 듣고, 남자의 의견으로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

W: Honey, I noticed that Brian can't seem to focus on anything for more than a few minutes. I wonder if there's anything we can try to help him.

M: Well, what about a cup pyramid activity?

W: You mean piling up cups like a pyramid? I thought that's just a simple game.

M: It's more than that. A cup pile-up activity is effective for improving concentration.

W: Really? How does it help?

M: This activity is based on practicing a short task repetitively, which increases attention length.

W: Hmm... That makes sense.

M: Also, trying to handle cups precisely to avoid errors naturally leads to high levels of focus.

W: Now I understand. This can be very helpful for Brian, then.

M: Exactly. Piling up cups is an effective activity for improving children's concentration.

W: Great! Let's have him try it.

3. 다음을 듣고, 남자가 하는 말의 요지로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

M: Hello, FitQuest4U subscribers! I'm John Willer. Do you often feel pain in your legs after a run? Then, the following tip may help you. Shortening your steps can reduce the risk of injury when you run. If you take long steps, additional stress is put on the hips, knees, and ankles, increasing the risk of injury. Instead, if you shorten your steps, your body is placed in a natural forward-moving position, which decreases the amount of force coming down on your joints. So, to lower the chance of injury when you run, shortening your steps may be the answer. That's all for this video, and I'll see you in the next one.

4. 대화를 듣고, 그림에서 대화의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것을 고르시오.

M: Jenny, look at this picture. I found it in our family album.

W: Wow, it's an old photo of Dad.

M: Yeah. He's sitting on the chair in his room as usual.

W: He was quite proud that he made that chair himself.

M: I know. And there are two books on the table.

W: He loves to buy new books and read them after work.

M: That's right. Does the round clock on the wall look familiar?

W: Uh-huh. Now it's in your room, isn't it?

M: Yes. It's amazing that it still works well after all these years.

W: It is. Also, do you remember the painting next to the door?

M: I do. He enjoys finding hidden treasures like that at flea markets.

W: Oh, look! There's the check-patterned rug.

M: We have lots of good memories playing on it.

W: I love this picture. We should show it to Dad.

W: Okay. Yesterday, I put up a banner for the event.
M: Yeah, I saw it at the entrance to the multipurpose room.
W: Did you prepare a playlist for the background music?
M: Yes, I did. I'm sure those songs will create a comfortable atmosphere to help students write their letters.
W: Good. Next, I bought letter paper and envelopes for students to use.
M: Wonderful. Oh, we don't have a mailbox for the event. Can you make one for students to put their letters in?

M: In that case, I'll take one pair of standard scissors.
W: Okay. Is there anything else you need?
M: Yeah. I also want to buy a watering can. How much is it?
W: It's $3 for a small-sized can and $6 for a large-sized can.
M: Then, I'll take the small-sized one.
W: Great. So, that's one pair of standard gardening scissors and one small-sized watering can, right?

W: Then, what color do you think your mom would like?

W: Good afternoon, students. Dogs are known to be loyal pets, but they're capable of much more. So today, we'll learn about rare jobs that dogs do around the world. First, there are dogs in France that find valuable mushrooms called truffles. Their sharp sense of smell allows them to locate the truffles precisely, which saves people time and effort to harvest them. Second, on an island in southern Australia, there's a type of sheepdog that protects the penguin population. These dogs guard the shores where the penguins live to keep them safe from foxes. Next, winemakers in Chile use dogs in wine storage facilities for quality control. The dogs smell the wine barrels to detect if any are spoiled or contain harmful elements. Finally, Italy has specially trained dogs that act as lifeguards for its most popular beaches. These dogs pull drowning people to safety and even jump out of helicopters to rescue people in the water. Now, let's watch a video showing these dogs in action.
